

Spring Online Professional Development

Promoting Infant and Toddler Social and Emotional Development

In this professional development course, participants will explore the question "What is social and emotional learning within infants and toddlers, and why is it important?" Participants will be provided with positive social-emotional opportunities for infants and toddlers and develop the skills necessary to build a solid foundation for very young children. Topics such as how to help young children: form secure relationships; feel good about themselves; and develop confidence and self control will be highlighted.

Using Ages and Stages Questionnaires® as a Screening Tool

Are you interested in learning how to use Ages and Stages Questionnaires®, including Ages and Stages Questionnaires: Social-Emotional, as a screening tool for children ages three months to five years old?

Join Trying Together for a three-hour professional growth session that provides information on how to administer, score, and share the results of the screener with families. The session will include resources for making referrals to additional services.

This course will be instructed by Carlow University's Coordinator of Undergraduate Education Programs, Pamela Zimmerman.
